Petrarch's Book Without a Name by Francesco Petrarca

Francesco Petrarca

Petrarch's Liber sine nomine is a set of 19 letters at the corruption of the papal court docket at Avignon, and on Petrarch's hopes for the reestablishment of the temporal religious preeminence of Rome. Those letters signify the impassioned feedback of an clever observer who had first-hand wisdom of the corruption of Petrarch's Book Without a Name Avignon, "the latest Babylon." Avignon is "where frankness is named foolishness, crafty is termed wisdom, God is despised, funds worshipped, the legislation trodden underfoot." Rome, the Petrarch's Book Without a Name place Petrarch believed the papacy rightfully can be located, was once "the holy mother, the queen of cities." Indeed, his indictment of the papacy used to be so unremitting, that Petrarch needed to exclude the letters from his gathered Epistolae familiares, carry them again from booklet till after his death, and take away the names of his correspondents in addition to such a lot clues to their identities.
